The Rhine Bioenergy Lab measures Ultra-weak Photon Emissions from healers, martial artists, meditators, and people who are strongly focusing their attention. For nearly 14 years, they have been exploring the energies that may enable healing activities through the measurement of low-level light emissions in the ultraviolet range. Recent results have demonstrated that experienced study participants can intentionally control the expression of ultraviolet light and that it seems to correlate with healing activities.

John G. Kruth will discuss the lab, his finding through the years, and why these findings are important to anyone who is interested in the topic of energy healing.
